Gompers, president; Frank Morrison, secretary, and John Mitchell, vice president, of the American Federation of Labor, guilty of contempt of court, in the Bucks Stove and Range case. Chief Justice Sheppard dissented from the opinion of the court on constitutional grounds.

Mr. Gompers in a recent interview said that if the decision was adverse an appeal would be taken to the Unit-ed States supreme court.

The Fundamental Issue.

The court held that the fundaments saue was whether the constitutions agencies of government should be obeyed or defied. The mere fact that the defendants were the officers of organized labor in America, said the court, lent importance to the cause and added to the gravity of the situa-tion, but it should not be permitted to influence the result.

"If an organisation of citizens, how-ever large," the court held, "may dis-obey the mandates of the court, the same reasoning would render them subject to individual defiance. Both are subject to the law and neither is above it. If a citizen, though he may honestly believe that his rights have been invaded, may elect when and to strike terror into everyoody outside as own ranks—workers, employers and the general public alike, and to coerce the president of the United States, the congress and the courts, federal and state, to do its bidding.

What would the country think if the head of any great industrial, commercial or transportation interest should violate the law as these men have done and should challenge the courts to carry out the law and to enforce their decrees. "It must be remembered that these men are not convicted because of their attempt to destroy the business of the Bucks Stove and Range company, but because they openly defied the order of the iederal court."
